

In the Garden

May 31

TODAY'S the thirty-first of May
And summer's surely on the way.

Honeysuckle fills the air
And early roses, full and fair,
Lift open faces to a sky
That's blue and bright: who can deny
That summer's bursting to begin?

In three weeks' time, the days draw in.
